

ABC of Politics

VIRUS IN THE VATICAN

There is undoubtedly "something rotten in the State" of the Vatican, but Catholic Church inmates, ex-mates, enemies and on-lookers all seem very much at variance in their ideas and estimates of what, when and how the apparently healthy body found itself suddenly a helpless prey to the latest religious virus: variations of latter-day gnosticism.

Anyone who has read Mary Martinez's block-busting book: The Undermining of the Catholic Church can be under no delusion that "it is nothing to worry about" or that "it all began" (like a post W.W.I influenza epidemic) in the wake of the Second Vatican Council; but still, as in politics, it was the gradualness of the erosion over the decades, of what had been thought to be inviolate doctrine, that caused the bewildered confusion among clergy and congregations everywhere until the great majority of sheep obeyed their herd instinct and stayed where they were seeking what sustenance is still available in the eroded pastures. It was the shepherds who were "scattered".

There is always a snake in the tree, waiting to advocate the digestion of "knowledge" as indispensable for the acquisition of the superior understanding which, transcending faith, will enable the man who gains it to reach equality with, even transcendence of his creator. How ironic it is that these latest new age-one worlders whilst telling themselves and less gifted mortals, that they are now on the verge of completing the improving changes to the original Divine creation suggested by their own unaided reasoning powers, should have fallen for the wiles of the world's first confidence trickster and his long "busted flush"; for all their self-vaunted superior intelligence, they can only come up with an equally unoriginal version of the gnosticism that saw our first progenitors out of Eden.

Addis and Arnold's Catholic Dictionary is very revealing on the subject of the turning of gnosticism (higher knowledge) into "the formal principle of heresy".

It says: "Let the allegorical interpretation be applied to the New Testament, and let its literal sense be put aside as worthless, and then, under the plea of higher knowledge, Christianity might be changed at will. A man had but to suppose himself possessed of this higher gift, and then, on a plea of allegorizing he might explain away every fact and doctrine in the traditional belief. Nor need he trouble himself about explaining it away. He might mutilate the text of the gospels: he might mix tenets borrowed from the heathen philosophy or religions with Christianity; he might by treating the moral law as he had treated Christian doctrine, invent a new code of ethics. All this he might do, and all this the Gnostics actually did. In fact, when the way was opened, the motives for pressing into it were strong enough."

Thus: the definition. Then came the punchlines: the results of its adoption.

"The age of the Gnostics was eager for novelties in religion, and addicted to fantastic superstitions. It was the fashion of the time to mingle philosophy, mythology and magic. There was then more inducement to amend Christianity by the introduction of foreign elements, because, whilst it showed a life and power to which neither philosophy nor heathenism could pretend, its teaching on creation out of nothing, on the resurrection of the body, on salvation through the sufferings and death of Christ the Son of God, ran counter to every prejudice of the heathen world. There was not a sect among all the countless sects of Gnosticism which did not deny each one of these doctrines. Above all, the central idea of Gnosticism made it welcome to many who were half-converted from heathenism." (Or today: to many who are half-reconverted to it.)

"It was a knowledge superior to and independent of faith. Faith was for the multitude", - the opium of the masses? - "knowledge for the few".

"Such then, was the nature of Gnosticism. It was a false knowledge which threw off the trammels of faith and ecclesiastical authority. It subjected everything to the caprice of the individual," (freedom of conscience) "and made any fixed rule of faith impossible."

Easily recognisable as Satan's sin: pride. But he is Lucifer who was the brightest one in Heaven where every creature sees God who made him, so the fall of Satan and his followers was irredeemable. So, the human race became the target of the fallen angels' irreversible malice and of God's redeeming grace.

In what then, do our "modernists" differ from those who "professed to impart a knowledge greater and deeper than the ordinary doctrine of Christians, knowledge which forgot the limits of reason and scorned to believe what it could not understand?"

Well, they certainly no longer boggle at believing "what else they do not understand", if evolutionists provide any comparison.

Again, as in the beginning of the second century A.D., it is important to remember in the ending of the twentieth that Gnosticism is not a philosophy although it is as "unfettered and unstable as any philosophy could be," now as then, it keeps a semblance of Christianity for without its Christian elements it could not be in a position of dialogue - that fashionable phrase - with the Catholic Church. The prelates of the Church could not prattle about "seeking the good in every religion," from snake charmers to voodoo practitioners.

However, the really fundamental difference between Gnosticism then and Gnosticism - or modernism - now is not just the arrogance of the "intellectuals" such as Teilhard de Chardin or Hans Küng but the obduracy of the hierarchy in flouting the Syllabus of Errors, no longer insisting on the taking of the anti-modernist oath before ordination to the priesthood and the abandoning of the Mass of all time for the priest and "People of God," to enjoy a convivial "meal" preferably to the accompaniment of a "pop" band, hopefully "to entice the young". Knowledge (Gnosticism) in this democratic age is not just for "the few" it is for "the many". What was the Bolshevik phrase? "The opium of the people"? So we are back to the errors of Soviet Russia "which will spread all over the world if we do not heed the exhortation of the Mother of God at Fatima to: Pray for the conversion of Russia that the Pope will dedicate that unfortunate country to her Immaculate Heart, which, if done in conjunction with all the bishops of the Catholic Church will bring about "peace for a time".

The "people", some of them, have prayed and "a Pope" has dedicated, since 1917 when the request was made, but somehow there were fewer mentions of Russia before the prayers, and the dedication when at last it was made, was not pronounced in conjunction with all the bishops and "Russia" was attached parenthetically with "the world". So - no conversion and the reverse of peace anywhere. The papal leadership is now conspicuous for its ambiguity and the virus in the Vatican looks to be in the bone which makes it incurable except by a miracle. But will God perform that necessary miracle since mankind has so signally failed to act upon the warnings although accompanied by apparitions at La Salette and Fatima of the Queen of Heaven herself climaxing in the "miracle of the sun" witnessed by thousands of people, not a few of them atheists or sceptics in no mood to be fooled, who could only fall on their faces in terror at what seemed like the beginning of the end of the world.

Now that Modernism in the Church is the rule rather than the exception, the relaxations of men appear to have superseded the Commandments of God.

Euphemisms soften the erstwhile unequivocal description of sexual sins. Fornication becomes "having a relationship"; adultery: "having an affair"; contraception: "family planning"; abortion: "termination of pregnancy"; and lastly: the sins crying out to heaven for vengeance: wilful murder; the sin of sodomy; oppression of the poor; defrauding labourers of their wages. How often do we hear the sins of abortion and contraception related to the first; statements from the pulpit relating the "gay scene" to the second and usury to the third and fourth? In fact sin is seldom mentioned at all. It is all brotherly love, even if it does sometimes look suspiciously like temptation to commit sodomy; and as for hell fire that is just a medieval bogey to elicit funds for the grasping princes of the Church.

Since we know that God will not do for us what we can very well do for ourselves; we have to understand at last that the prideful, erstwhile "few" have so spread "their" fatal disease that they have become the stupid "many". It is now we who are "the few"; we who possess the "knowledge" to do the will of the everlasting God who will give us strength to bring to battle and defeat "the many" in this final conflict.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT?

There has been lately come to hand the latest plea for the Third World and its starving millions. It is a pamphlet entitled Food for the Poor which organisation is lauded as "the result of the ever expanding vision that began with Mr. Ferdinand G. Mahfood. He answered, 'Here I am Lord', when he felt God's call to adopt the indigent poor of the Caribbean." This appears under a photograph of Ferdinand Mahfood of Food for the Poor being greeted by Pope John Paul II.

The answers to the question on the pamphlet "How does Food for the Poor Operate?" is that it operates by begging "support of individuals like yourself. Your support enables us to reach forgotten, suffering members of the human family." And then; the punchlines:

"We are unique in asking churches and missionaries "of all denominations," (our italics) "What is your greatest need? and striving to fill that need immediately and directly." No one need be surprised to learn that it is an interdenominational organisation chartered as a corporation for the purpose of improving the health, economic, spiritual and social conditions of the poor throughout the Third World.

Observations that come to mind after reading this thoroughly up to date begging letter, are: that though the information comes in the form of Question and Answer; and the answer given to the question addressed to missionaries of all denominations: What is your greatest need? In the absence of any other it seems to have been found among the "goods bought in bulk from world markets at the lowest possible cost".

Strange - we thought that in the minds of missionaries, everyone's greatest need would be: The Truth. Doesn't it say somewhere: "seek first the Kingdom of God and all these things will be added" or words to that effect? But we suppose that answer might lead to a delaying discussion among "all denominations" as to what is the Truth.

The circular came into our possession because it was enclosed with The Wanderer.

Tailpiece: Anyone in the 'First World' who has managed to "forget" the 'Third World' must be either illiterate, deaf, moronic or solitarily confined.

ORGANISE - Whom? If I'm an anarchist, nobody's going to organise me, thank you very much. Set up an organisation around me and count me as a dissident!

CLASS STRUGGLE - Struggle against whom? Does the editor of "Organise!" fight those above him in the class scale or those below or both? If he considers his status just right he must resist any tendency to sink or any opportunity to rise in the social scale - and "class struggle" must mean fighting both upper and lower layers.

WHEN IS AN OCCASION OF SIN NOT AN OCCASION OF SIN?

Cardinal Hume, Archbishop of Westminster gained approving headlines in what pass for newspapers nowadays when he exhorted us to: "have greater understanding" towards homosexuals. Quote: "Love", he says. "Between two persons whether of the same or different sex is to be treasured and respected.... To love one another whether of the same or different sex is to have entered the area of the richest human experience."

So, if two self-styled "Gays" frequent each others' company, that is not a temptation to sin, which not to avoid would be in itself a sin anyway. Times have changed. In the not very distant past, the pre-confession examination of conscience in the then Simple Prayer Book, asked: "Have you avoided the occasions of sin?"

If the propinquity of lovers whether of the same or different sex is not now recognised as an "occasion of sin" to be avoided, perhaps we should ask Mike Tyson's partner in rape if she still agrees with that optimistic view.

The following article first appeared in Winston's Journal under the headline:

MR. ROCKEFELLER'S "MEXICAN BAILOUT"

Winston's happened to catch U.S. ambassador to Mexico, Jim Jones, on a KFB Spokane, open-line radio talk show in the early hours of Feb. 1st. Mr. Jones had obviously been rushed in to do damage control on Bill Clinton's $49 billion loan guarantee to "save the Mexican peso." Fending off angry callers, Jones stated that "the U.S. taxpayer isn't on the hook for this loan." Ambassador Jones further stated that should Mexico default on the U.S. co-signed $49 billion in loans from the international banking system, "Mexican oil and gas revenues will pay back the debt by being deposited into the Federal Reserve Bank."

Translation: This means that should Mexico default - which is only a matter of time - the Rockefeller-owned Fed will get all the Mexican oil and gas reserves presently being paid to Mexico by David Rockefeller's oil and gas corporations. In fact, the royalty money will already be pouring in as Mexico struggles to pay back the money it's now forced to borrow. This spells the end of Mexican sovereignty over its own natural resources. No wonder the peso was pushed through the floor.

HELL TO PLAY

PART TWO

SUBLIMINAL MUSIC AND THE SUBVERSION OF THE CHRISTIAN WORLD

Part Two of the transcript of a lecture held at Forest House; here Sandro Soriano secretary of Reconquista expands upon his theme of a hidden, satanic message in modern music.

To summarise what we have heard so far we can define Rock (music) as a process connected to the ritual of magic, but a real process always moves to a precise aim which has been set as the objective from the beginning.

So what then is the goal pursued by Rock music? We can take our answer directly from Rock Stars with a clarity that does not leave any room for doubt whatsoever. The answer is; their goal is the physical and intellectual enslavement of the Young.

To give you some examples:- the first one comes from the influential Rock magazine, Rolling Stone, "Rock is more than a kind of music, it is the centre of energy of the new culture and of a youth in a revolutionary stage."

George Harrison, formerly of the Beatles, "music is the main interest of modern youth. The fact that grown people do not listen to it is of no importance because they are finished. Now they are out of the game."

Paul McCartney, also formerly of the Beatles, "Our music causes straight emotional instability, pathological behaviour and, not rarely, revolt and revolution."

Graham Nash, an American Country musician is talking here about the power of his music, "Pop music is a media capable of conditioning the thought of the people listening to it. I think musicians, thanks to this music, enjoy tremendous advantage. We can direct the world. In fact we have at our disposal the necessary means."

Mick Jagger of the Rolling Stones, "We always work with the aim of directing the thoughts and the will of the people and the majority of other groups do the same."

One of the mottoes of the pop group Kiss goes like this; "The God of Rock and Roll is going to steal your virgin soul."

Talking about young people, Spencer Dryden, the drummer with the band Jefferson Starship said; "Enrol them while they are still young and bend their spirit."

Even more overt is the declaration of Angus Young of AC/DC; "Maybe we have found the horse of Troy to conquer a world that up to yesterday would have been impenetrable." This Trojan horse is clearly Rock music.

We end with an enlightening statement by Jimi Hendrix that points directly to the subject that we are examining. "Music is something intrinsically spiritual because it talks to the spirit. Through music you can hypnotise the public and when it has come to the point of major vulnerability you can print on their subconscious anything that you want."

The subconscious, now this is the channel to be used to penetrate the inner-being of people and from there to shape their decisions. The means to access in this technique has a precise name, "the subliminal message."

The word subliminal comes from the Latin "Sub Limen", that is to say "underneath the threshold". It is in fact the transmission of a message aimed at reaching the listener in their subconscious. Such a message bypasses critical faculties and lies dormant in the brain, awaiting a sympathetic emotion to trigger the message into conscious thought. It is already twenty years since many governments prohibited by law any subliminal messages or any such techniques used in the fields of publicity; in cinema, television, radio broadcasting and so on. Nobody has yet taken any action in relation to subliminal messages on vinyl, cassette or video tapes.

Through this legal loophole Rock has evolved itself freely in the world of subliminal messages using the very sophisticated means that it now has at its disposal. The makers of these subliminal messages are very well aware of their goal. It consists of the manipulation of the tastes, the habits and way of life of the unsuspecting victim. The receivers of such messages are unaware of them and because their critical mind is not on the alert they cannot operate normal discrimination. The subconscious receives the message, reconstructs it and then transmits it to the memory.

Many neurologists and psychiatrists who have deeply studied the assimilation in the mind of hidden or backward transmitted messages, amongst these it is worth mentioning some important scientists in these fields like Roy Silvermann, Lou Ryder and Hal Becker. William Yarrol Jnr. is the President of the Applied Potential Institute of Aurora, Colorado U.S.A. He has done the most work in this field. His conclusion is that at the base of everyone's brain there is a "control valve" which he terms the "click valve." Our emotions are based on a priority valve system. A message given to our brain will be accepted or refused by this "click valve" on arrival. If the sound or the message is not familiar it will enter; to be scanned better by the brain, where it is evaluated by a system of familiarly acquired values, but with a hidden message, the message enters the right hemisphere of the brain. The left hemisphere is the part which contains the consciousness. The right hemisphere, which is called "creative" will work on such a message and collect it like a mirror for the other part of the brain, the memory, where it joins already received, familiar acquired values. Once recorded in the memory, it can under the right circumstances, pass into the consciousness of the victim, who is unaware of what has happened. Clearly

"through music you can hypnotise the public and when it has come to the point of major vulnerability you can point on their subconscious anything that you want" the more times such an implanted message is received the more strongly the victim accepts the message as being valid. There are three techniques used to transmit the subliminal message:-

- (1) The subliminal signal.
- (2) The beat or rhythm and its subliminal effect.
- (3) The verbal message.

We will take a brief look at these three techniques.

The subliminal signal: With this it is possible to engrave into vinyl or onto a tape an ultrasonic frequency, something similar to a dog-whistle, a so-called silent whistle. When the brain is stimulated more than once by an ultrasonic frequency it produces a bio-chemical reaction similar to an injection of morphine. The substance put into circulation is known as endorphin, which is a naturally produced morphine. This reaction contains a double effect. First it produces a strange sensation of well-being and the de-activation of the mental processes. Such a situation allows the easier reception of the hidden message. This type of subliminal attack has been used many times, for example by the Beatles. For example on their album Sgt. Peppers Lonely Hearts Club Band.

The second technique, the beat or rhythm and its subliminal effects. The power of Rock music lies in the beat which produces in the body a bio-physiological effect that is able to determine the function of parts of the body. The beat of Rock produces an increase in the heartbeat of a person and also increases the degree of adrenalin present in the blood. If this is taken far enough it can provide a sensation of sexual well-being which sometimes brings the person close to orgasm, but more commonly induces a general sexual desire. To give another example, an American fast-food chain determined that by playing fast, loud Rock music in its restaurant, the increase in the pulse rate and heart beat of customers would direct them to consume food at a much quicker rate and to eat more food leading to an increase in profit.

Thirdly we have the subliminal verbal message, which is at the heart of the problem. This technique is known as the "backward masking process". Here a phrase or phrases are recorded backwards and cut into a track on vinyl or cassette, usually at a low volume. This is all taken in by the brain to be decoded by it. Subliminal messages such as these are instantly understandable if you take the source and play it backwards. Enough of words, now for some concrete examples of what we mean...

NOT ONLY AMERICANS SHOULD WORRY

The 2nd February issue of The Wanderer (described in the U.S.A. as: National Catholic Weekly) provided rather more food for thought than usual. An article recommending a book: Separating School and State by Joseph Sobran* recalls the fates of Randy Weaver's wife and son who were killed by F.B.I. sharpshooter Lou Horiuki, whom he says is one of a "growing breed of Americans; who presumably aren't what we call criminal types; yet feel that a crime committed with government approval isn't a crime."

As he says: "The 20th century has amply proved, the state is the most murderous institution that has ever existed. Tens of millions of people have been killed by their own governments, which is to say by agents of their governments, who feel morally justified in killing - whether the victims are their fellow citizens or foreigners - because they have official authorisation to do so."

"Liberal thinkers," as we know, blame these massacres on "monsters" such as Hitler, Stalin, Pol Pot etc - never, of course, on such as Churchill, Roosevelt for instance, since they belong or belonged to "Democracies" which are infamous for indoctrinating "the people" with the dogma that the state can do no wrong, and, it is the citizen's duty to obey its laws and orders without question. The penalty for refusal is death or imprisonment for treason: therefore says Joe Sobran, "the real 'monster' is the ideology of the state." That must be the reason that he is described as; "America's most censored conservative." In the same article he recommends the book: "Separating School and State" by Sheldon Richman, which sounds as if it should be compulsive reading for the denizens of every country "enjoying" state education; as it "offers a provocative thesis that, far from 'failing' as its critics charge, the public school system is succeeding in its real purpose: turning children into obedient creatures of the state."

In Britain: the public, i.e. state, schools are rivalled by the "private", i.e. Public schools in providing fodder for the "monster" to carry out its murderous missions.

It may be that there are schools that educate rather than brainwash but these have usually to be provided or organised by parents determined to save their children from being subverted into the state's disciplined citizen army being trained to commit any crime to order.

As it is true, as Richman says; that "State Education is not about education; it's about power", this is one of the areas where it is possible for determined people to exercise that power for themselves instead of supinely condemning themselves and their children to the malignant power of the modernist state.

DINOSAURS

A friend of mine, the other day,
Said things are going downhill.
America's road is rough today
And tomorrow rougher still.
Now, I agree, but fail to see
Where "America" comes in here.
Is this some needy childhood friend
Who's bent his kindly ear?

What and where is America,
That we should fuss and fret?
If we put it in a cup of tea,
I wonder what we'll get,
It must be just around the bend,
Tomorrow afternoon,
With all the form and substance
Of a carnival balloon.

I hate to put my faith in things
Then find I've been deceived.
This figment called America
Is just a make-believe.
It's not for Oz or Shangri-la
The road lies rough and long;
It's White men living here and now
Who'll have to right the wrong.

My friend thinks we're a breed
apart;
Much smarter than the rest.
Politicians can't abuse us
'cause we're Constitution blessed.
Somehow this golden set of rules
Has "chains that bind them down",
And puts a wall 'tween them and us
They just can't get around.

The Constitution guaranteed
A reasoned use of power.
It's no surprise that lasted
For about a half an hour.
The guns we had the right to bear
Are pointed at our heads
To back up superseding laws
And power-crazy feds.

The articles and sections
Of Constitution-fame,
Based on their poor performance,
Will have to take the blame
For building up the same old Beast
With the gaping hungry maw,
That laughs at those who fight it
With Constitution-law.

My friend becomes indignant
And liable to fight
If he suspects that anyone
Has trampled on his rights.
He's got hundreds of these silly things
That cause him so much strife.
And they apply on universal scale
To every facet of his life.

These liberal aberrations
From two dozen decades hence
Caught on like mental candy bars
At reality's expense.
But talk about God-given rights
Is spurious because
God didn't give us any rights;
He only gave us laws.

There's not much in the universe
That men agree upon.
One race's laws of wrong and right
Are another's right and wrong.
You have to have the power
And the will to mount the heights.
Without them, all the rest is Wasted talk about your rights.

But of all my friend's illusions
And misplaced sentiment,
The thing he's most enthralled by,
No doubt, is government.
He's quite content to welcome
To the bosom of his home
This insolent usurper
Of everybody's throne.

Men grow so used to taxes
And doing what they're told
They lose the will to question
The source of their control.
And if someone tries to show them
How they can still be free,
They'll shout him down and stone him
And call it anarchy.

Government's the framework
By which a dozen thieves
Reduce ten thousand careless fools
To slavery, by degrees.
Wise men know what fools forget:
Don't ever plant the seed.
We have no need of government;
The Law is all we need.

"America" is a trick put on
By men who're not our friends.
And "rights" and "Constitutions"
Just serve governmental ends.
The whole thing works for con men
And their worthless hangers-on,
Who just can't stand to leave us be,
To live the way we want.

My friend, in truth, is really me
Not very long ago.
And I pray that God will teach me
The things I still don't know.
The main thing is to move ahead
With what will work the best.
Right now it's time to lay these
Mental dinosaurs to rest.

It's always hard to put away
The standards of the past.
But now's the time to do it,
Before the die is cast.
Of human flaws and failures
There mustn't be a trace.
The future's new foundation
Must be God, the Law and Race.

INVISIBLE ASSETS

The Chancellor, so knowingly,
How best to waste sovereignty
And rush into a false cash-flow
Where fraud and swindle fast can grow;
Where Britain made to 'federate'
Gets into County Council state,
In a Europe made to dance
To usury's evil ordinance.
The Mister Know-All Kenneth
Clarke
Has other visions off the mark,
He sees a mighty works of steel
At Consett and applauds the zeal
By the workforce and the flow
Of molten stuff and furnace glow?
In fact, this foundry of the air
Is fantasy and isn't there.
It went the way of all the rest
Which once was British and the best.
Fifteen-years and on the dole
Those splendid workers - Clarke, so droll!
Like Euro-dream, so much hot-air,
Let's pray that soon it won't be there.

B.E. BIGGS

A SPOTLIGHT ON INSIDER DEALING.

For those who follow the ins and outs, and ups and downs, of the nationalist movement in the Western world, it is interesting to note that there has been an evermore obvious and open attempt by Jewish and Zionist forces to buy out groups, associations and magazines that once would have been regarded as bastions of those opposed to the power of Israel and International Jewry. We have seen it in England, in Italy and amongst those who like to style themselves as "New Right" or "National Bolshevik" in Belgium and France. In the main, those who have deviated from the nationalist line - in the widest sense of the word - have been of little lasting importance, although in selling themselves to the enemy they have, necessarily, found it desirable to 'hype' up their importance in the overall scheme of things, if only to assuage their vanity and increase their 'pay off' proportionately.

News has of late come to Candour which indicates that this unusual form of 'insider dealing' has moved to a new plane in the United States. There can be very few people who have been in the Cause for any length of time who have not heard of the Institute for Historical Review, based until recently in California. The work that it has done in the 15 or so years of its existence is incalculable. It has provided a rallying point for those writers, thinkers and academics who have come, by various means, to question the validity of the Second World War thesis that "Hitler exterminated six million Jews". The IHR has built a network of moral support; it has held major conferences on themes directly related to the Holocaust and other subjects; it has published works of both a popular and academic nature and has thereby created a substantial constituency which denies that the Holocaust - better Holohoax - ever took place. There can be very little doubt that the results of a recent American survey into Holocaust beliefs, and which revealed that some 40% of Americans do not believe in it or have extremely strong reservations about its veracity, are in large part due to the IHR. It is not surprising, therefore, that it is an organization which has a very low popularity rating in Zionist and Jewish circles! Nor should it surprise us that it has been subjected to all kinds of pressure - legal, financial, bureaucratic, physical - from the Powers that Be over the years, and whose objective was to put it out of the business of telling the Truth.

The man most responsible for putting Holocaust Revisionism on the map is Willis Carto. It was he who conceived the idea of the IHR; it was he who put up a lot of the money to get it off the ground; it was he that worked to promote it in every way, especially through his populist weekly newspaper, The Spotlight. We now understand that there has been a coup d'état at the IHR, led ostensibly by the former staff, but which is clearly the work of more malignant forces. As with the Catholic Church, the enemy has understood that the most effective way of destroying its opponents is from within, and always in the name of conserving "the original purpose". The modernists destroying Catholicism have been doing so in the name of a totally fallacious "return to primitive Christianity", whilst the IHR is being destroyed in the name of stopping Mr Carto from turning it into "a Nazi, racist grouping". Anyone who has ever read Carto's Spotlight - and which is his long term 'baby' - will know by its tone that its founder is very far from being "a Nazi" or "a racist". Indeed, the fact that these terms of abuse have been thrown up by former IHR staff tells more about them and their hidden agenda than it does about Mr Carto's politics. Has Mr Carto made mistakes over the years? Probably. But who hasn't? But do mistakes, real or alleged, justify stealing his property? Or side-tracking the Revisionist Cause? Hardly.

The case is very complex with all its twists and turns, but very simple in its aims. If you cannot destroy the IHR, why not take it over lock, stock and barrel? How? By making agreements with natural allies. In this case the Church of Scientology. Anyone who has ever come into contact with these people will know that it is a very shady organization. But what few people realize is that its founder, L. Ron Hubbard, the science fiction writer, was a disciple of Aleister Crowley, the English Grand Master of Satanism in this country and abroad before the last war. Crowley was no amateur playing with ouija boards and tarot cards, but one who spent most of his life working with demonic fervour to promote the cause of Satan.

Now it so happens that the head of the IHR for a decade or so was Tom Marcellus, a man who is said to be "very high in the Church of Scientology"; the selfsame 'church' that has been seeking charitable tax exemption status in the USA for years. It is also an interesting fact that the day that Willis Carto and his supporters were ejected, bamboozled and defrauded out of the IHR building, its stock and apparently ownership, was also the day that the 'church' received its much sought after exemption status.

Two further facts also need to be kept in mind. The first is that this clique of disloyal staff, who were paid generously by Carto, are seeking to enhance their financial status by selling off the IHR's book stocks, worth a conservative $1,000,000; our friends in the ITP tell us that they have already received an invitation from Mr. Marcellus's people to buy stock "at bargain basement prices"; in other words, selling off someone else's property cheap before they are brought to book. The second interesting fact is that suddenly the 'reformed' IHR can now count upon a number of Jewish 'revisionists' who are pledging to rid the IHR of its 'crank' image, by bringing forth 'serious scholarship'. You have been warned!

This notice is not designed to give all of the ins and outs of the case, but is simply aimed at warning the gullible and misinformed that the IHR of old is no longer in business. When an organization's leadership is made up of Satanists, queers and Jewish academics, you can be sure that it is not business as usual. For those who would like to know more, write, citing this article, to: The Spotlight, 300 Independence Avenue, S.E., Washington DC 20003, USA.

The good news to round off this failed attempt to thwart Historical Revisionism is that Mr Carto and the bulk of the people behind the old IHR has now set up a new body, The Centre for Historical Review, under the leadership of historian, George Fowler, and is publishing a most interesting journal called The Barnes Review. If you would like a copy send an International Reply Coupon for £2 to: The Barnes Review, 130 Third Street, SE, Washington DC 20003, USA. But whatever you do, don't support those who don't support the Cause!
